Momento

A little story about taking a moment

Olive the little fox was always first.
First to run, first to jump, first to shout I know!

One morning, Olive wanted to get to the other side of the river.
Olive didn't stop, Olive didn't look, and Olive jumped!
Splash!

Ruby the owl watched her from her branch.
Little one, Ruby said softly.
Before you jump, you take a moment.
What's a moment? asked Olive, soaking wet.

A moment is as long as one deep breath, said Ruby.
Only after you stop, breathe, look and think, do you act.

Stop

Breathe

Look

Think

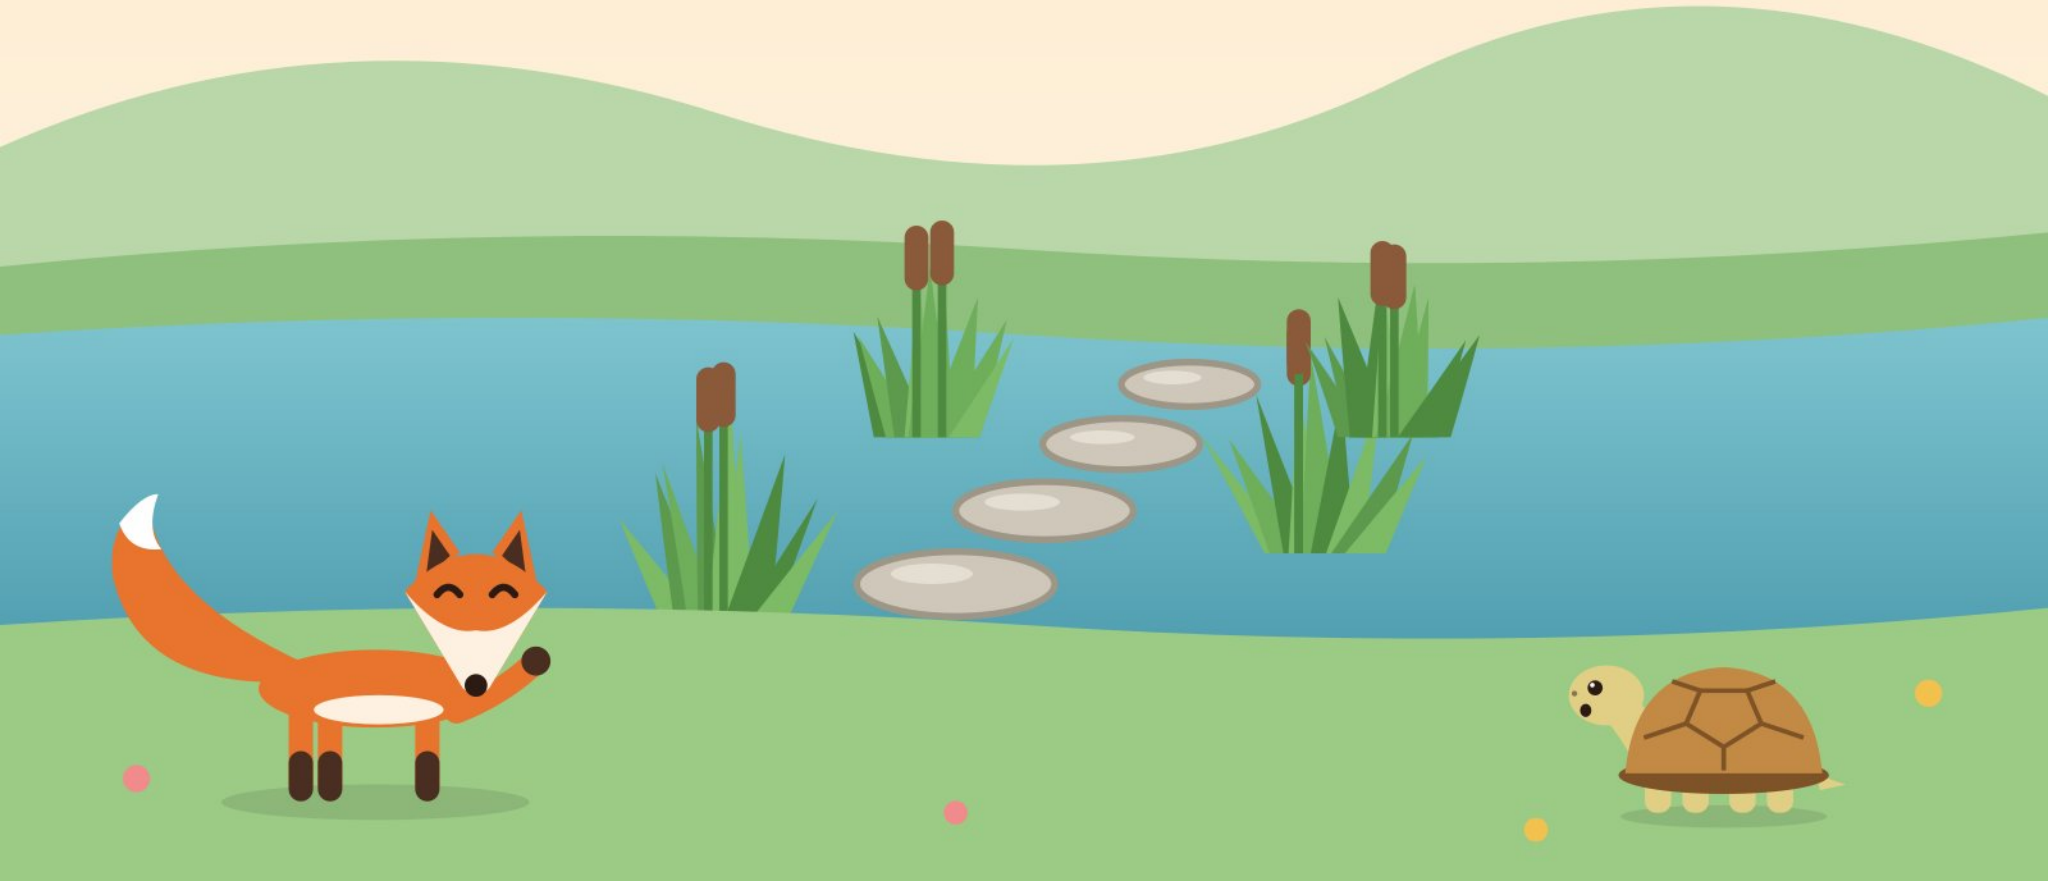

The next day, Charlie the turtle stood by the river and sighed.
The current is too strong! There's no way across, said Charlie.
No crossing, and nothing else to do.
Olive wanted to turn around and run home.
But Olive remembered, and took a moment.

This time Olive didn't jump.
She walked slowly along the bank, step by step.
She looked up the river.
She peeked between the plants, again and again.

And suddenly, between the plants, Olive saw something.
Flat stones stood in a row above the water,
hidden among the plants.
There was a way! she said happily.
It was just hard to see when you're in a hurry.

Step by step, Olive and Charlie carefully crossed the river.
When someone tells you there's no way,
or when you feel like rushing, said Olive,
take a moment and look again.
Charlie smiled. A moment, I can do.

That night, snuggled in bed, Olive whispered,
Good night, river. Good night, stones. Good night, little moment.

For parents: Regga is here to help the helper.

Our smart assistants answer fast, and sometimes too fast.
Like Charlie by the river, they sometimes say:
There's no way. There's no such app. It doesn't exist.
When really, the answer is there, it's just hard to see.

We built Regga so you can take that moment for yourself.
When your smart assistant says something doesn't exist, we look again.

Because sometimes, all it takes is a moment.
